Acquisition expands Assemblin's operations in Kristianstad

Assemblin Electrical has acquired the electrical operations of Secer AB ("Secer") through an acquisition of assets. Secer, which has broad expertise in electrical engineering, has nine employees and annual sales of approximately SEK 15 million.

With offices in Kristianstad, in southern Sweden, Secer conducts installation projects as well as service assignments for electrical, automation, data and alarm systems. Customers include major local industrial and construction companies.

"By acquiring Secer, we broaden our existing operations in Kristianstad and strengthen our skills and expertise in the industrial and service segments. We are very impressed by the high level of expertise at Secer and look forward to developing our Kristianstad office together," says Fredrik Allthin, President of Assemblin Electrical and Head of the Assemblin Electrical business area.

"Assemblin is a well-reputed installation company, able to offer employees improved development opportunities, while providing customers access to additional expertise. We agree on key values, such as our culture and focus on quality, and I am therefore convinced that this will be a good ownership solution," says Marcus Nilsson, owner of Secer AB.
