Assemblin produces design drawings for new Central Hospital in Karlstad

In the extensive new construction and rebuilding project planned for the Central Hospital in Karlstad, three new buildings are to be constructed. In Phase 1 of the project, Assemblin in Karlstad was assigned by Skanska to produce design drawings for the heating, sanitation, cooling, gas and automation systems. Assemblin's assignment involves some 160,000 m². The order is valued at about SEK 37 million in total.

“Assemblin has profiled itself as a significant player with experience in a large number of projects within care and social welfare buildings. We are proud to have again been entrusted with a role in such an extensive assignment,” says Andreas Aristiadis, Business Area Manager, Assemblin Heating and Sanitation.

Work is now in progress with the planning of the new buildings with the objective of establishing efficient and safe patient flows and working methods. The new construction project encompasses three different buildings, the reception building, the emergency room and the entrance hall, with care units that have common points of contact. The reception building will be Sweden's first wooden framed healthcare building. The Region Värmland seeks to be a leader in forest bio-economy where wood is used as the dominant material by the construction industry. As a whole, the project extends until 2036, when the final building, the entrance hall, is scheduled for completion.
